"Pure Humanity"

In noticing the trial of Bushnell for forcibly rescuing a fugitive slave from the custody of the U. S. Marshal, at Oberlin, recently, the Springfield News says:

"The slave was forcibly taken from the U. S. Deputy Marshal, without a writ or legal authority of any kind. Notwithstanding this, the finding and imprisonment of respectable citizens for doing an act of pure humanity will not do the administration party in the State any good—and they are too well aware of it."

"Pure humanity!" That is cool. Men with pistols, knives, guns, clubs, etc., by threats, and by force of arms, rescue a runaway slave, from the custody of an officer of the General Government, and yet the violence of lawbreaking is "pure humanity," and commendable, according to the News. Had Bushnell merely given the runaway food and lodging, and assisted him on his way, some excuse might be made for him; but he, at the head of a mob of armed rowdies, attacked the Marshal and posse, and by violence rescued the fugitive. He exceeded all peaceable bounds; he became a law breaker; his conduct was unbecomingly wicked and vicious; and his unlawful acts called for punishment. It matters little whether the enforcement of the laws will "do the administration party in the State any good" or not, the laws will be enforced; the violators of law will be punished. Whenever the negroes are in a case, the Republicans offer a premium upon lawlessness; they teach that resistance to the laws is right and commendable; that such violent proceedings are the offspring of "pure humanity." We don't think our contemporary of the Xenia News would interpose violence to prevent the arrest of a "fugitive from service," in that locality.

WEATHER PREDICTION.—A correspondent of the Louisville Courier, writing from the steamer Pacific, on her way to New Orleans, thus speaks of one of the passengers:

A young gentleman from Texas, while under the influence of liquor, accidentally shot himself as the boat lay at Mississippi Landing, on Sunday last. The ball entered near the top of the leg and came out just above the knee, causing a severe, though not dangerous wound. On his person were found three revolvers, one Derringer, one large bowie-knife and one small dirk. He was truly a dangerous man.

Two Heavy.—A gentleman residing back of Covington, Ky., has several family servants who are so lazy and trifling, that he can hardly get any work out of them. One of them particularly, was so very trifling that some time ago he told him that he might go over to Ohio, and go among the Abolitionists. But we will let a correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer tell the rest of the story:

He is a full grown, strapping negro, capable of earning a dollar a day if he would work, but that he won't do, although he is found at home as regularly as meal time arrives. Out of all patience with the fellow's laziness, the Colonel took him the other day down to the ferry-boat, put him on board and told him to go over to the Abolitionists in Cincinnati and let them take care of him and be sure never to come back again for he didn't want to be troubled with him any more, telling the Captain at the same time not to allow him to come back on his boat, and sure enough the boat took him across.

Congratulating himself to thus getting rid of an expense of a couple of hundred dollars a year, he went to his office, and in a few hours after he left his office for his residence. On arriving home, what was his astonishment to find the rascal he had just sent away vigorously engaged in sawing wood, the first stroke of work he had done for years, and ever since, the Colonel added, he has shown a willingness to make himself useful, fearing that he will actually be driven from home.
